It's taken 4.5 billion years for our world to evolve from the dust of stars,
The churn and spew the molten rocks into a solid form that we can call ours,
The spark of life, from primordial seas, we moved from water to land,
And through the aeons we grew and changed, made flippers into hands.

The micro-organisms and virus life, they only developed so far in size and brain,
By stroke of fate the branch of life that became the apes, led to us homo-sapiens,
From the age of stone, through iron and bronze we were able to walk erect,
Increased the power of our brains and out of all species we became select.

The origins of man were understood, the highest form of life we have attained,
The planet is ours to nurture, grow or lose, no other creature can do the same,
The Greatest life form in the space we know, with intellect, senses, and mind,
With body and skin in colours and size, an amazing feat of evolution over time.

... then we scribble on it....
